ZEITSCHRIFT FUR DEUTSCHE PHILOGIE (18)

RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 338 pages. OCLC Number: 52826790 Excerpt: . . . Preface This study began as an exploration into current and emerging models of business incubation in the US. As events progressed, however, it was expanded to include a survey of business development and incubation activities present in the countries of North Africa, the Middle East and traditionally Islamic nations of Central Asia. Thus the study provides something of a mix for readers. The first half of the work, which comprises chapters 1, 2 and 3, describes new models and trends in business incubation in the US as the result of the increasing presence of early stage seed and venture investors. Additionally, the effects of globalization can be seen in the more recent emergence of incubation facilities in the US that are owned by foreign corporations and or consortia of government and industry groups. These latter facilities are designed, more often than not, to provide foreign-owned companies with a means to open up US markets. To that end, they not . . . the many forms only provide the usual array of business support services but also a and approaches to variety of cultural socialization activities, such as language classes and business incubation assistance in locating living quarters. depend as much on the level of development The second half the study, in contrast, is a survey of business of a given national development and incubation activities in the Middle East, North Africa, economy as on and the Islamic countries of Central Asia. No attempt was made to cultural traditions. . . analyze the successes, failures or operating styles of the various programs currently underway in those countries. Information was taken largely from Internet-based sources, along with other publications. Consequently, any shortcomings...
