Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Every Saturday, Vol. 2: A Journal of Choice Reading, Selected From Foreign Current Literature; July to December, 1866 Then the utter silence of cool and peaceful night reigns undisturbed until about four o'clock, when the first sound is some matutinal cock, who crows first because he is proud of being first awake. After he has asserted his priority thus once or twice, another deeper-toned rooster replies, and presently a dozen cocks are all in full song, and in different keys. In half an hour, you hear a man's voice; next, some feminine voluble remarks; then a latch is moved and clicks, the dog gives a morning bark, and a horse stamps his foot in the stable because the ladies have aroused to breakfast on his tender skin. At length a pig grunts his gastric juice is fairly awake, the day is begun. And so the stream of life, thawed from its sleep, flows gently on again, and at length the full tide of village business is soon in agitation, with men's faces and women's quite as full of import as if the little place were the capital of the world. There is genuine poetry, it will be seen, in the composition of our captain, nautical though he be; he brings an eye for all he sees he tells us of the state of the herons and the burnished wild-fowl that haunt his little highway; he paints the kingfisher, often the same fellow-creature that his eye encounters, perched on a twig within two inches of the water, and shaded from the summer sun by a single brier-leaf, so still and steady on his watch...
