The required writing, note or mem0randum, in order to be sufficient to validate the agreement within the statute, must contain the substance of a completgagreement so that the full intention of the parties can be ascertained from it alone without recourse to parol evidence. While the note or memorandum may consist of several papers (forming one in law ), it cannot be partly in writing and partly by parol;3 it may be in the shape of a telegram or letter, or both; it may be written in pencil as well as in ink; it may be a letter to a third person; it may be contained in the minute book of a corporation. If the real contract of the parties may be ascertained from the writing, it is sufficient even if extrinsic evidence is necessary to prove a case made on the..
