Excerpt from The Influence of Temperature on the Frictional Resistance Experienced by Plane Surfaces Moving in a Fluid Reynolds also discovered one of the important laws of similitude for the motion in a viscous fluid, which law is now generally known by his name; (dr. Zehm called the authors attention to the fact that Reynolds law had been deduced theoretically by Reiholtz as early as 1352; This law states, that if two systems moving in viscous media under the exclusion of free surfaces are to be dynamically similar, the pure number R must be the same in the two systems, where: v is any particular velocity, l is characteristic length and ν is the coefficient of kinematic viscosity of the medium.
