Excerpt: . chapter iv. opportunities on the battle-field. having thus discussed the most difficult and characteristic role of guns and cavalry, we will turn to study some examples of how they may turn opportunity to account on the battle-field itself. Of modern instances of such co-operation there are not many; the cavalry and artillery work in 1866 was not quite satisfactory, and in 1870 the French squadrons were admittedly mismanaged. There was a great cavalry combat certainly on the 16th of August, 1870, at Ville-sur-Yron to the north-west of Mars-la-Tour, but before it took place the German Horse Artillery had been absorbed in the general fight, and no guns supported Barby's charges. Nor do we find them in the other brilliant charges which occurred on that day, that of the Brigade Redern, or of Bredow's Brigade, the hero of Tobitschau, that one I...
