Page Publishing, Inc., 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . I was seven years old. I was suicidal. My dad came home from Vietnam with post-traumatic stress disorder. My days were horribly dark. I had a real monster in my house. A big tall scary monster. A monster no one could make go away because it was his house too. That was my this. As a child, I believed that God told me, This will get better, I promise. As an adult, God showed me this always gets better. Nights can be black, dark, and cold. Night always fades into day. The cold of winter translates into the warmth of spring. Sometimes your this can be bloody. A very bad injury cannot be fixed with a Band-Aid. If you put a bandage on a wound that requires stitches, you will not heal properly. There will be infection. One can make their this worse because of ignorance of healing. You just do not know enough to believe for any kind of change. Healing is often a process. Are we even aware of the work it takes to heal a heart, a mind, or a very bad memory? There is healing. THERE IS HOPE. To make life even more interesting, there are a group of people most of us meet along the way. They are do nothing people. If you are wise, you will not be distracted by these people. They are everywhere. They love to have fun. The do nothing people are sitting, watching television, and drinking beer. They are not resting from their labor and preparing to continue on their journey. They were never on a journey to begin with. These are people who sit on the sidelines of life. They are...
