BookBaby, United States, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Identity. Something each of us struggles with at some point in our lives. Who am I, and what is my purpose? Can we make sense of so many unknowns? The dreamer they call Katylyn, tries. Who am I, God? asks and, through a series of chapters, seeks to resolve some of the toughest questions and pains of growing up that young women face. This book explores moments of faith, fear, love, heartache, change and stagnation, through an honest and light-hearted lens. Katylyn knows that discovering identity can be difficult. This documented journey was created to offer encouragement and support to the beautiful young women who may also be whispering in their minds: who am I, God? The point of this book is not to give step by step instructions of how to fix your life. It's not to throw seemingly pointless advice in your face, either. Instead, this book is a reflection of my thoughts and ideas about the journey of change. Journeys in which each who travel them embark adjustment, challenges, fear and resistance. There's nothing anyone could ever say to make change easier, regardless of how many self-help books present themselves. In that case, this book is to be considered as more of a comfort, that you're not the only one facing challenges and taking down giants. It's simply a reminder that change is a fact of life, and God will always be there to support our weary selves in the mess of it all. This book is a reminder that today is not the end, and to smile, because the sun always shines whether we see it or not.
