Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints!--Ps. cxvi. 15. That which has been purchased at an immense cost must needs become precious to the owner. However insignificant it may remain in the eyes of others, the treasure will be valued by its possessor. He will value it--not according to its intrinsic merit, but in proportion to the greatness of those sacrifices which, to him, appeared worth making in order to obtain what he desired. And we were redeemed, not with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a Lamb without blemish and without spot. Therefore are we of value to our Saviour, who, at such unspeakable cost, has purchased us for Himself. Having made us His own, He has taught us, day by day, with tenderest patience. Line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little, and there a little, as we have been able to bear it, --so has the Good Master worked in our hearts according to His blessed Will. And now, as the last hour approaches, shall not He, who has so long and patiently carried out His loving purpose, I rejoice in perfecting the work which He has so nearly completed? Though we must pass through the valley of the shadow of death, we need fear no evil. Yet this is not because our last moments may be so easy that death itself shall...
