Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: AV Akademikerverlag | A prospective clinical trial comparing three different dressing materials in split-thickness skin graft surgery | Skin grafting is a well-established procedure using skin or skin substitute to cover non-healing wounds or burns with the body's own tissue. Management of donor site wounds in high-risk patients is crucial and bears a challenge, especially in an ever-growing elderly patient cohort, adequate to better knowledge and material supply. This clinical trial compares two artificial foam dressings and a temporary artificial skin replacement dressing for donor site wounds in elderly patients receiving split-thickness skin graft surgery. Major criteria in this patient cohort were pain management, re-epithelialization time, prevention of infection, functionality and patient satisfaction. The "ideal wound dressing" always depends upon the patients' individual demands and there are different focuses at particular points in time. We observed painless most important for patients immediately after surgery. Both dressing materials guaranteed a supportive and painless healing process with low intervention and thus meet requirements of an ideal dressing for high-risk patients best. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 118 gr | 220x150x4 mm | 76 pp.
