Excerpt from Record of Experiments With Sorghum in 1890 The last portion of the original precipitate which resisted the action of the solvents preceding the use of cuprammonium exhibited a similar mixture or combination of mucilaginous and carbohydrate bodies found in the portions soluble in water and H<sub>2</sub>SO<sub>4</sub>, and appearing to differ mainly in the degree of solubility. By the cuprammonium was discovered and obtained a preparation of true cellulose, which appears to have been in combination with the other body which was separated from the cellulose as already described. It is possible that the latter body may be a carbohydrate which is soluble in an excess of acid which would not affect the cellulose. However, the combination of the cellulose with a gum or mucilage body is strongly indicated. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
