Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Little Red Gown: A True Story I can vouch for the truth of the principal statements and incidents in this story. Mary Stillwell, was the daughter of John Stillwell, who was a sterling patriot and a Quartermaster of the First Regiment of the Monmouth Militia in the war of the American Revolution. He owned a farm at Garret s Hill, in the Township of Middletown, where he resided, his house and farm buildings were burned, and his farm stock all stolen by the Tories and refugees in the war. His wife was Elizabeth Watson, daughter of John and Hope Taylor Watson, the latter marrying John Burrowes upon the death of her first husband. Elizabeth Stillwell had a sister Hope Watson, who married Col. Asher Holmes of the Continental Army, and a cousin was Mary Taylor, the wife of Absalom Bainbridge, and the mother of Commodore Bainbridge. Mary Stillwell was about eight years of age at the time of the Battle of Monmouth, and lived with her mother on the homestead. About the Publisher Forgotten...
