Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Toni Leland (illustrator). Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.An escaped Walking Horse that has been treated brutally is found wandering in Cary McCutcheon s pasture. Cary is the highly principled owner of a successful equine insurance agency and horse farm. At first sight, Cary knows exactly what has been done to the horse: he has been sored. Soring is a crime punishable in both federal and state law. Horrified and angry, Cary knows he can t let this go. He must open his own investigation into the crime. He asks his best equine insurance investigator, Connie Holt, to find out who inflicted the colt s injuries so the culprits can be prosecuted and punished. Cary and Connie realize that they have no hard facts to start with except the condition of the colt Cary entrusts to the care of veterinarian Mary Evans and farrier Jacob Sanders. The worst problem in finding the truth is that soring is a hidden, dark crime that most people don t want to talk about; moreover, many refuse to give information they have about people in their own horse communities who sore horses. Some are frightened when soring people threaten them; some don t want to lose the business the sorers give them; and some even prefer to deny that such a shameful treatment of horses exists, calling it a cultural practice and therefore acceptable. Both know that they will be risking physical danger as they build their case. There is good reason to believe that whoever hurt the horse will not give up easily, not where money and prestige in Walking Horse circles are motives. And Cary and Connie will have to be ready for unexpected developments that must...
