Representation and Respect, Imposition and Contempt; Annual Parliaments and Liberty, Long Parliaments and Slavery But without inflicting. On these things as fact; and only admitting the possibility of them from the combined causes already assigned, of long parliaments, undue influence and bribery, his natural to expect, as indeed all experience shews it must happen, that country, whose affairs are rejeered into such hands must be ruined, sooner or later, by those very men who shall be in the office of its guardians and preservers except it shall make an alteration in this particular. And accordingly, we find our own, country in a condition which shews that its affairs have long been in such hands. It has passed through all the stages of abuse, and is at length arrived at a precipice tremendous to look from. The current of corruption is smooth andattering and it meanders for a while through scenes not unpleasent to the careless passengers: but it is deceitful, and sure to terminate in a Niagarian-fall and to dash its navigators headlong into the abysses of avery and wretchedness, unless they take warning in time and will manfully exert themselves. Our giddy vessel of fate is swiftly gliding down this current and, by the velocity with which the passing shores of our fair provinces fly from our wondering eyes and are left to fight, we may know that we are in the dreadful vortex, and we may hear the very roaring of the cataract. But yet, we need not perish, except the character of our. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at www....
