Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Confederate Veteran, Vol. 36: July, 1828 Sixty - three years ago, the Confederate soldiers laid down their arms and returned home to begin life anew. The battles they fought during four long years of bloody struggle were not half so hard as the one which then confronted them; and how they fought that hardest battle is set forth in the rehabilitation of the South and the establishment of their people. Very few of that disbanded Legion of Honor sur vive, and not more than three thousand attended the annual reunion at Little Rock, May 8, 1928. The people of Little Rock had made bountiful arrangement for their entertainment, and the old soldiers were greatly pleased at the hospitable reception accorded them. Numerous committees were active in receiving them and providing for their comfort, but the snap and dash of the old men was gone. Nearly all of them are hard of hearing and are feeble in body. There was no Rebel yell to excite the people and to quicken their interest. The camp that was provided for the old warriors was several miles distant from the city, and those who attended the meetings were transported to the camp in auto mobiles and by street cars. The writer, like others, had hoped to meet some of those with whom he served, but they were not there. Only one man of the company I commanded sur vives.
