Eventually the cap end opened and a creature of bright blue metal slid from its interior and stood upright. The figure was that of a man, except that it was not human. The humanoid bent to the ship, withdrew a small metal box, carried it to a catalpa tree at the edge of the wood and, after an adjustment of several levers and knobs, dug a hole and buried it. He contemplated it for a moment, then turned and walked toward a road. He was halfway to the road when his ship burst into a dazzling white light. When it was over, all that was left was a white powder that was already beginning to be dispersed by a slight breeze. History is filled with invincible conquerors. This one from space was genuinely omnipotent, but that never keeps humanity from resisting! This item ships from multiple locations. Your book may arrive from Roseburg,OR, La Vergne,TN. Paperback.
