

Toronto Modern: Architecture: 1945-1965 (Paperback)

By -

COACH HOUSE BOOKS, Canada, 2002. Paperback. Condition: New. 2nd edition. Language: English . Brand New Book. Toronto, like the Senate of Canada, seems ever fated to be the place for sober second thought. Blessed with undeniable urban vitality, it is yet weighted down by a serious case of the what-ifs , by the burden of histories it doesn t have. Some of these histories never existed; others have been demolished. Originally published in 1987, Toronto Modern was prepared as a catalogue to accompany the eponymous exhibition organized by the Bureau of Architecture and Urbanism (BAU), a group of architects devoted to the recognition and preservation of Toronto s Modernist architectural heritage. Initially formed in response to the unfortunate demolition of George A. Robb s 1955 Bulova Tower (to make way for the Molson Indy racetrack!), the BAU was instrumental in challenging and revising Modernism s reputation as an aberrant temporary interruption of the Western classical tradition. They strove to emphasize the differences - both physically and theoretically - between European Modernism and our own homegrown brand, arguing for the historical and economic significance, charm and dynamism of some of Toronto s most interesting and storied buildings, including the O Keeffe...
