Excerpt: .such regulations were wanting is a melancholy truth, too evident to every person who travels through this kingdom, and consequently sees what tracts of wood have been laid waste by tenants for life of all descriptions, who so far from leaving reserves, are seldom at the pains even of fencing up the young coppice, for the advantage of their successors.- Amongst many other instances, I am sorry, I am obliged to state, that I have been eye-witnesses to the fall of nearly two hundred acres of beautiful well growing oak, in a romantic valley, on the fee lands of To be enabled to pursue this excellent method, the utmost care mould be observed in felling coppices in such a manner, as may ensure of Glandclough in the county of Wicklow, three times within the space of twenty-four years--the produce of each sale to the several Archbishops never exceeded one hundred pounds, and as I am informed, amounted once only to fifty pounds, or five shillings per acre for a coppice, which had it only been preserved for the same number of years, though not containing a single reserve of a former growth, would have produced thirty pounds per acre at the lowest valuation, or fix thousand pounds in placeoi fifty. I am far from wishing that any individual or body of men, and least of all at this time, that the church should be deprived of the smallest portion of their rights and property, but...
