Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Study of the Local Literature of the Upper Ohio Valley, Vol. 26: With Especial Reference to the Early Pioneer and Indian Tales, 1820-1840 The present study of early literature in the Ohio Valley has grown out of the writer s interest in the general problems of local literature. It follows, and is in part a development of, an earlier study of West Virginia Literature, written as a thesis for the degree of Master of Arts at West Virginia University in 1913. The interest shown by many readers in the earlier work has been a great encouragement to the writer to make further investigations in the same field. To one who heard in childhood at some Ohio Valley fireside these old stories of pioneer and Indian days, and who later laboriously spelled through the hair-raising accounts of Doddridge and Withers, there is a perennial appeal in the story of our pioneers - their ideas and accomplishments and all their manner of life. In reading great numbers of these early tales the writer has observed a noticeable development in both the spirit and form of these local writings of the Valley, particularly in the expression of a new and progressive Americanism and a tendency toward a matter-of-fact or realistic view of frontier life, unknown in the earlier American writers. If this be true, then this local literature - crude and uncouth as it is in many respects - is also of interest in a general view of the development of American literature. During the preparation of the present study the writer has been greatly assisted by general suggestions from Dean J. V. Denney and from Dr....
