The message was written on a slip of paper by Raja, a beggar boy who lives in the slums of Mumbai. Many years ago, when he was a very young child, a stranger abducted him from the school premises and sold him to a beggar. Years have gone by, and Raja grew up, begging and suffering the cruel treatments his master inflicted on him. All the while, one thing has remained clear in the back of his mind: the undeniable truth that he did not belong to the beggars world. The event of his abduction has been haunting him day and night. Desperately, he wants to go back to his family, but he does not know who his parents are or in which part of the country they live. One day, heartbroken and longing to find his blood, he scribbles a message on a piece of paper and leaves it in a busy street in Mumbai, believing that the Universe works in such a manner that it brings fortune to the earnest seeker and every atom in the creation works for him. The message dropped in the street is like a stone thrown into a pond. It causes a ripple. The paper silently passes through many hands, travels thousands of miles, crosses rivers and mountains. Will that ripple reach Raja s parents and reunite the family? Is his belief true? Does the Universe work for the earnest seeker? A...
