They were at home. Notice that play, in 1, is used with a subject of the first person, and plays, in 2, with a subject of the third person. It is evident that the form of the verb sometimes depends on the person of the subject. Notice that was, in 3, is used with a singular subject and that were, in 4, is used with a plural subject. It is evident that the form of the verb sometimes depends on the number of the subject. 353. A verb must agree with its subject in person and number. 354. Verbs expressing natural operations, like those pertaining to the weather, are called impersonal verbs, meaning without person, because the subject (which is regularly the pronoun it) does not refer to any definite person or thing; as, It rains....
