THE BLOW-UP MAN (PAPERBACK)

Outskirts Press, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . The Blow-Up Man is a psychological thriller that takes place in a dispirited region of West Texas. It is where pests, weeds, predators, and strong winds make living in the region a burden to most. West Texas is not a place for the weak or a naive, young woman with a head full of fantasy. Abandoned homesteads along the barren countryside represent the many dreams that didn't come true, but the nightmares that did. In the middle of the vast rural region is Ethanville, an agrarian town of 100,000. It is an unlikely place to find a university. A barbed wire fence is all that separates the institution of higher learning from the adjacent grazing land. Inside the hallowed halls of Cullen State University is where Faye Brady falls in love. Thirty-year-old Faye has lived a sheltered life. With a deceased father, and an emotionally detached mother, Faye exists in a world derived from the imagination of the many authors she's read and falling in love means living happily ever after. Life without a father has left Faye with many unresolved issues. They're major contributors to her falling long and hard for her older mentor, Dr. Todd Davis. Dr. Todd Davis is a well-respected researcher in the area of pharmaceutical sciences, and it's under his direction that Faye earns her PhD. He's handsome, and his intellect, experience, and confidence are all powerful enticements that draw Faye into his world. Faye's mother, Madeline Brady, is concerned about her daughter's relationship with Todd. Faye interprets her concerns as intrusive, but it's Todd's age and baggage that cause Madeline to worry. Fourteen years ago, Todd had...
