The 132 drawings catalogued document most of the major examples of ancient Roman pictorial art known to seventeenth-century Rome. They include early finding such as the "Aldobrandini Wedding", the Nile mosaic from Palestrina, the marble pictures from the Basilica of Junius Bassus, and later finds such as the Harbour Landscape (found in 1668) and the Tomb of Nasonii (1674). Detailed accounts are given of the discoveries, and a general introduction assesses the significance of the Cassiano assemblage within the wider context of contemporary antiquarian interest in ancient painting, its collectors and copyists. Catalogue entries describe and discuss the drawings in great detail, relating them to the original mosaics and wallpaintings as they survive in their present state of preservation. All drawings catalogued are reproduced, mostly on a large scale and mostly in full colour. They are frequently accompanied by illustrations, also in colour, of the ancient originals. Review "This book will be of great interest to people concerned with ancient Roman art, seventeenth-century antiquarians and the history of archaeology. The work is very valuable for its methodical format, its convincing and detailed text, its scholarly apparatus, and the beautiful illustration of each dal Pozzo image, accompanied by adequate comparative visual material."
