Who does not remember De Quincey s Sarsar wind of desolation, and the chill shudder that quivered through the soul as the harsh adjective came blowing like a discord into the music of that incomparable writing? Not a misgiving, however, crossed my heart when, shortly before Christmas, my father asked me if I thought myself possessed of the qualifications necessary for collecting a bad debt. The business of collecting, father, said I, with what malicious friends called my prize-poem manner, is odious in some of its features to a man of spirit; but it may bring into play some of the finest faculties of the human mind. And body, added my father, in a quiet sort of way. If courage is needed, said I, laughing, I am the son of my State-the State that does not know how to surrender! As for tact, civility, address, urbanity, and downright stubbornness, these desirable qualities are surely mine by right of inheritance. Well, well, said my father, meditatively, it is a pretty rough place, Sarsar is. The debt is one thousand dollars; and if you get this sum, or any part of it, I don t mind saying it is yours for a Christmas-box. For many reasons these were delightful words. First, while I fully intended that my life should teem with good things, at present it was as bare and empty as a sun-dried skull. My father, with the best intentions in the world, was so indifferent to the doctrines of Malthus as to become the parent of a perfect brood of young ones, each of whom had to stand on his own legs...
