RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 60 pages. Original publisher: Washington, D. C. : U. S. Govt. Accountability Office, 2009 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)316854515 Subject: Drugs, Nonprescription. Excerpt: . . . a BTC drug class would give consumers access to more drugs that could benefit their health. Pharmacists could counsel consumers on BTC medications and, consequently, some drugs that were unsuitable for OTC availability could be made available as BTC drugs. Proponents argue that this would be particularly important for underserved populations, such as the uninsured, underinsured, or those with limited access to a primary care provider and, thus, to prescription drugs. Moreover, an FDA official told us that many of the drugs that could be switched to OTC under the current two-tier drug classification system have already been reclassified and that a BTC drug class might allow additional drugs to be switched out of prescription status. . The convenience of acquiring BTC drugs at a pharmacy could improve consumer adherence to drug regimens by eliminating the need for a visit to a physician to obtain refill prescriptions. Additionally, FDA has noted that people are now taking a larger role in managing their health. Experts...
