Not illustrated. 1806 Excerpt: .the instance of such a character as Lord Mansfield; a man, who, when I call your attention to what your friend Mr. Burke has said of him, I think must create some blush in your face, that you should have adduced such a character as an example worthy of establishing as a precedent for the vesting any man with a power, incompatible with the true principles of the British constitution, and dangerous to the liberty of the subject. Alluding to Lord Mansfield, Mr. Burke says, It is really singular that a man in the cool decline of life, bred through the whole course of it in a profession of peace, a civil magistrate, a judge, covered to the chin with the judicial purple and bloodless unspotted ermines, should be distinguished above all others for a character of hazard and desperateness in his counsels! Lord Mansfield s...
