TELBAT, is the Gold Medal Winner of the 2016 eLit Book Awards in Religious Fiction. The novel begins on the brink of World War III. American outcast Andrew Foworthy leaves the US to answer his call to take the Gospel of Christ to the nomads of Mongolia. Once a rebel and hooligan on the streets of New York City, Andrew found Christ and his calling while in prison. Against all odds and with little support, he begins his trek to the cold and brutal land where horses and dogs outnumber people. But on a lonely mountaintop, a plane crash hurls Andrew into the Altai Mountains of Western Mongolia. With hope waning, and salvaging only a backpack and bicycle, Andrew struggles to survive on the edge of the harsh Gobi. If the feuding clans don't kill him, the weather just may! Andy joins the nomadic Mongolian and Kazakh people where he is quickly engulfed in a raging conflict between the giant forces of Russia and China. He soon realizes his sacrifice for the nomads may demand the...
