Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Perceptual Factors in Reading: A Quantitative Study of the Psychological Processes Involved in Word Perception It was planned accordingly to limit the scope of the investigation to a single problem, and to rely as far as possible upon statistical methods for results. The particular problem chosen is the factors and processes involved in word perception as it takes place in adults in normal visual reading. As anticipated, however, this has turned out to be by no means a simple problem; in fact, it has proved to be much too comprehensive for a satisfactory treatment of its many phases within the brief scope of a study of this character. Attention has therefore been confined almost exclusively to those phases which seemed to lend themselves most readily to the statistical method and which thus gave promise of most immediate returns. This mode of procedure, to be sure, may tend to a certain incoherency and incompleteness of results but, in addition to the practical advantage mentioned, it should have a tendency to free the investigator from theoretical bias as far as that is possible...
