By Barbara G Sommerville

Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Chauncey Speed Nelson always knew he wanted to be a pilot. Growing up on a farm, he spent his days dreaming of his plans to join the Royal Canadian Air Force, or to just buy a plane of his own if that didn t work out. But when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor in 1941, Speed found his purpose in life-a bomber pilot for the U.S. Air Corps, flying for his country. Through his own journals, interviews with his contemporaries, and his daughter s journals, join Speed for the fear-and adventure-of a lifetime, from his first training days to twenty-eight of his forty terrifying and thrilling missions flown out of Italy. Experience the terror of bailing out of a burning plane only to end up in a POW camp-and yet being able to look back, years later, and declare I came through swell. These personal experiences come through in the context of history-the details, targets, and strategic importance behind each mission, illustrating the complete picture of what it was really like to be a pilot during the war and lead his crew...
