The legislation would have a disparate impact on the online industry. Second, I am concerned about limiting general privacy legislation to online practices. Whatever the potential of the Internet, most observers recognize that information collection today is also widespread offline. Legislation subjecting one set of competitors to different rules, simply based on the medium used to collect the information, appears discriminatory. Indeed the sources of information that lead to our number one privacy complaint - ID Theft - are frequently offline. Of course, applying the legislation offline would increase the complexity of implementation, again under-scoring the difficulties inherent in general privacy legislation. 3. We have insufficient information about costs and benefits. Third, although we know consumers value their privacy, we know little about the cost of online privacy legislation to consumers or the online industry. Again, the...
