Sixteen year old Samantha Leightons forearm has become the diary of her woes. The once bubbly teenager has resorted to self-mutilation to cope with the pain stemming from a multitude of hardships that have befallen her. First, she loses her father in a car accident and then her mother becomes addicted to prescription pills and lives in a perpetual state of altered reality. The young girls life becomes even more complicated when she and her mother are forced to move in with an abusive uncle who is bent on making her life miserable. When Sam ends up in the hospital after a cutting incident that leaves her emotionally and physically weak, she meets twenty-six year old Angela DAbroe whose idyllic life is turned upside down when her boyfriend abandons her to seek fame on the road with his band. The two women form an unlikely friendship that neither one of them expects to last beyond their short stay in the hospital. The friends are reunited a couple of months later when Samantha turns to Angela for help after...
