PROTEIN MICROARRAYS

Mittal Publications, New Delhi, 2011. N.A. Condition: New. X+278pp Protein Microarrays is an academic which studies the physiological properties of cells, as well their behaviours, interactions and environment. Most of the current applications of protein arrays are focused on disease proteomics using conventional glass-based arrays. Proteins have been detected in practically all kinds of human fluids, including serum, synovial fluids and sweat. Technologies are being increasingly used in the pharmaceutical industry at all levels of drug discovery and development. Protein..
