A DYNAMIC ANALYSIS OF REGIONAL IMBALANCES IN PAKISTAN

Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: LAP Lambert Academic Publishing | Testing the Convergence Hypothesis | This study looks into the long debated issue of regional imbalances in Pakistan through the convergence framework as is implied by the Solow (1956) growth model. The period under study is from 1973 to 2000. The equation for the unconditional convergence is estimated through pooled least squares (PLS) technique. The estimation result shows that there is no unconditional convergence among the Pakistani provinces. The development gap among...
