Methinks, good sir, twere right that you That he in whom we are so much concerned Is of the new religion, like ourselves. Laroche. Madam, Im not the less disposed to stand by him. Marie. Its no light matter you will have in hand, But you will save him Laroche. Be sure Ill do my best. But let us look on all things as they are. It is not by the heart, but by the head That we must con the situation oer, And in it bow to this--that hes a man And will by men be tried. Marie. lis just in that I ground my strongest hope. Women, you know, Are guided by their hearts, and by their hearts Made headstrong. Mans citadel is doubly weak: For he may be assaild through heart and head. And is it not a glorious privilege, To lead...
