Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . It is the final years of Roman rule in Britain and chaos reigns. As the army collapses and the towns fall one by one to the Saxon invaders, competing tyrants and petty warlords turn upon each other. The north of the island remains aloof from the south, hiding behind its walls and forts while in the south, jealousy and intrigue paralyse the remaining town councillors. The last Roman defenders vanish into the Wood of Annwn fighting to the last. All seems doomed. It is a dark time but in that darkness a final light gleams. Deep within a strange storm a figure is found with no past and a heavy burden upon his heart. Alone he spins about him a fateful destiny to unite the warring Britons and bring the Saxons finally to heel in one last battle under the crumbling ramparts of Mount Badonicus. This is the story of Arthur, Dux Bellorum, known to the Britons as the Bear, and Donn, the god of death. A man caught on that cusp between the end of Rome and the dawning of a heroic age. A man in whose hands lies not just the fate of Britain but the end of Rome itself . . . Praise for the Author s previous novels The Nowhere Legion and The Janus Eagle : His characters are realistic and dark, the action is intense and unrelenting, and the story within a story will keep you turning the pages. S.Brabant His writing has an elegance and lyrical quality about it, and more than once I caught myself thinking, I wish I had written that. And I assure you, that is a rare feat. R.W. Peake, Author of...
