May 13th, 1896 An altitude of 5,000 feet does not deplete the wind currents of their moisture, so that the valleys which are located between the mountain ranges are everywhere well watered, both from the Atlantic Ocean and from the Great Lakes. There is, therefore, no region of the Atlantic seaboard which is deficient in moisture, and there is on the contrary a marked humidity. All this vast territory, including not only the Atlantic Coast, but also the Mississippi Valley where the conditions are virtually the same, is subject to great alterations in temperature. Great heat in summer and excessive cold in winter are the marked characteristics, with sudden changes in temperature and markedly humid atmosphere, in which the sensible extremes are felt with a discomfort which is unknown in the arid regions. On the Pacific Coast are entirely different, gigantic mountain system ranges between the Mississippi Valley and the ocean. Like the corresponding system on the Atlantic Coast, its general trend is towards a central axis, the direction, however, being from northwest to southeast. Generally speaking, this range has a high altitude, frequently more than 5,000 feet, and as high as 15,000 feet in every State and Territory. The ranges and spurs do not have a uniform and parallel direction, but are cut up in every direction, making in reality a series of mountain ranges of independent trend. Finally, the ascent is always abrupt and from the soft nature of the elements composing the mountains, the streams have cut their way far below the level of the surface; hence the gigantic...
