Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Masmid, 1943: Annual Student Publication These, very briefly stated, are the basic economic steps dictated by the modern industrial era. No attempt is made to conceal their revolutionary character, but at the same time it cannot be denied that they are both necessary and imperative. The results of the execution of such a plan would be far reaching in the extreme. Maximum employment plus maximum production would be maintained; The predatory price-economy would no longer exist, and in place of production for profit, production for use would be substituted. Under scarcity. Economy, the exigencies of the profit motive are the parents of such phenomena as willfully curtailed production, dumping, crop burning, price fixing and unemployment. Under collective ownership all of these evils would be eliminated. It would be in the interest of society to produce as much as is possible since the more that is produced the greater will be the individual's share of the wealth of that society. It has been conservatively estimated that under conditions of maximum production and equable distribution this country is at present capable of providing a comfortable, if not yet luxurious, standard of living for all of its inhabitants.
