Molds and yeasts have this in common. That they may all be found in ordinary dust, and it is usually in the form of dust that they reach our food. Dust you know is the dirtiest substance on earth. It is made up of such things as ashes. Fine sand. Bits of dead animal and vegetable matter. Dried sputum. Bits of wool or hair. Particles of cast-off skin and other such horrors. Certainly we want none of these in our food. But in dust the gravest menace to food lies in the living things present. The yeasts, the molds. The bacteria. The following report of an experiment may impress you with the gravity of this dust danger to food. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
