Among the masses of the American people arithmetic has been regarded of more importance than any other study in the educational curriculum. Other studies must be neglected, if necessary, in order that it may be mastered. This state of affairs being admitted, as well as the great evil that would result from the neglect of other most desirable branches of study, it seems to be the duty of those most conversant with the temper of our people and the time devoted to arithmetic, to put forth every energy to lessen the time, increase the efficiency, and minimize the useless efforts that attach to the teaching and acquiring of this subject. It is certain that no more fertile field is open in which teachers may reap appreciation for their untiring energies; for, as Agassiz has said, On the broad high road of civilization...
