Excerpt: . is the result of a course of reasoning from collateral facts, it is inadmissible. In such case the tribunal is-as competent to reason out the resultant opinion as the witness is; and by the theory of the law, it alone is competent to do so. In the case before us, there could be no ditficulty in stating the facts and circumstances attending the killing, and hence there was no necessity for the expression of an opinion or inference by the dying man. Could the jury have those facts and circumstances, they might disagree with him as to the existence of a reason for the shooting. Suppose he had been sworn as a witness in the cause, would it have been competent for him, in answer to appellants claim of self-defence, to have stated that appellant had no reason or justification for the...
