Lacy. And we will ever reverence tby name, Making the chronicles to speak tby praise; So Honorea may but have her speech. Dun. My lords, you know the hallowed gift of tongues Comes from the self-same power that gives us breath; He hinds and looseth them at his dispose; And in his name will Dunstan undertake To work this cure upon fair Honoren. Hang there, my harp, my solitary muse, Companion of my contemplation. He hangs his harp on the wall. And, lady, kneel with me upon the earth, That hoth our prayers may ascend to heaven. They kneel dozcn; then enters Clinton with Belfhagor, terming himself Cas Tiliano, and Anercoch, as...
