THE CREDIT MAN AND HIS WORK (CLASSIC REPRINT)

Forgotten Books. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 314 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.7in. Excerpt from The Credit Man and His Work To the cocksure and self-sufficient, young or old, the following pages will appear didactic and dogmatic. The editor trusts, however, that to the more open minded, they may be suggestive of practical ideas and methods. The editor has aimed to produce a book that shall neither be a fine spun subtilty dealing with the hair-splitting doctrines of finance nor a rambling memoranda of inconsequent anecdotes. Modern commercial credit is an evolution of nearly six thousand years. As such it is well for the credit man who would get at the very vitals of his work - to understand something of its history. As the laws of human nature are but laws of evolution, and as the law of averages is but the striking of a balance between what nature will do and what she will not do as governed by precedent conditions, and as credit is based on law of commercial averages it is well to know how these averages are struck in the world of finance as expressed in the business of banking. Banking being the purest expression of commercial credit, is treated as the denominator. From the historical and theoretical, if you will, side of the subject, to the practical applications of these theories as seen in every day life, is an easy and. acceptable progression.
