Excerpt: .of this case do not warrant us in here applying the principle we have noticed. The city officials who testified said that it was the intention in enacting the ordinance that every vendor of milk, whether he sold it exclusively or in connection with other articles, should pay the license tax, and that, although the ordinance was not enforced against persons who sold milk in connection with other lines of business, this failure was not due to any concerted action on the part of the city authorities to exempt such persons from the operation of the ordinance, but rather to the indifference and negligence of the officers charged with the duty of collecting the license fee. In the cases we have mentioned a reason was shown why the ordinance was administered unequally by the public authorities. In this case no such reason exists. It...
