BookBaby, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. An unconventional relationship story tackling contemporary issues; Alzheimer s, loneliness, ineffectual parents, religion, sex, adoption, women s roles, body image and everyday insecurities, Crazy Carousel Life, is a thought-provoking 35,300-word novella. Set in any city, Crazy Carousel Life tells a story of love overcoming psychological insecurities created through parental control. Robert and Angelica, both tarnished by their upbringing, manage parental encroachments in contrasting ways. Despite being a competent IT technician with IT Etc., Robert strives to overcome his critical father and his mother s death through escaping reality. Robert conjures himself heroic characters or fantasy animals; a World War 11 flying ace, the Red Baron, a unicorn, or other creatures, and also dreams a guardian angel will transform him from his perceived bland self into debonair Mr Suave, perhaps unconsciously, into a lady-killer like his philandering father. His perceived angel appears, but Robert blows it--too busy daydreaming himself as Pegasus, the wild stallion with magical hooves, and his angel vanishes. Robert s angel is a respected Researcher/ Marketing Consultant with Two Hands Clapping, a company working in remote parts of the world training locals in former war zones, to detect and destroy unexploded ordinances and develop new methods to find and dispose of unexploded land mines. She is smart and successful; however, she lacks confidence and must overcome her own issues--principally a picky, critically religious, lonely mother who Angelica often visualises in the form of artworks--and to confront her doubts has developed a mantra that she will be positive and assured. Angelica and Robert become friends, and after a work trip to Mozambique, Angelica arranges a dinner with her mother, her stalwart Uncle Ray and Walter, Robert s nickname, taken from an old classic The Secret Life of Walter...
