As Braxton falls for the most unusual woman he's ever known, he must find a way to maintain his affection, while accepting her horrible sacrifice of love. Charles Fargo's desperation for significance leads him to a venture of faith with devastating consequences for his hometown. Caught between the desire to do great things, and his mediocre existence, Charles takes on a simple task--moving a mountain. Bill Harmond was the perfect employee, and prospective mate, the man all the women at the office wanted--handsome and hard working, a creative thinker with an edge, kind, generous to a fault, a man of impeccable integrity, and the best serial killer the company ever had.
