Excerpt from The Biology of the Birch Leaf Skeletonizer, Bucculatrix Canadensisella, Chambers For twelve years after the description by Chambers there occurs no mention Of the species, but in 1887 Lintner recorded the occurrence Of the insect in! Monroe County, New York, where the larvae were very abundant on the leaves Of Betula lutea during the fall Of 1886. In 1890 Packard recorded what was in all probability this species On the leaves Of the white birch at Brunswick, Maine. Lintner again reported it from New York in 1893, this time as injurious to all the native birches in the region of Ausable Forks during September, 1891. The same year Fletcher stated that all the birches around Ottawa, especially Betula papyrifera, B. Lutea, and B. Alba (European white birch) were severely injured. From this time on the reports Of the insect become more frequent and the injury caused by its larvae more noticed. Hutchings published a brief life history in the 56th Annual Report Of the Entomological Society of Ontario and this treats of the insect more fully than any other publication to date. The species is of some economic importance, and most of the literature on it concerns the injury done to the birch trees.
