The qualities which become inherent are influenced also more or less proportionately by the amount of carbon contained. In this respect Chrome Vanadium Steel is a special steel in another sense of the word and cannot be judged by the same standards as the old carbon steels. The point of view of the examiner of the old commercial steels is always that of the actual condition in which the metal exists as he sees it before him and governed by the amount of carbon present. But this point of view has altered gradually until with Chrome Vanadium Analysis Steel the carbon range permissible to obtain specific characteristics has become narrowed. The presence of Chrome Vanadium in Steel intensifies the effect of the carbon in all the best qualities it is capable of producing alone. These increases take form not only in physical results, dynamic strength, resistance to wear, increased hardening power, lack of brittleness, etc., but also in purity, soundness and homogeneity of the metal. These are the specific contributions which chrome vanadium brings to iron as compared to the older simple steel. Unfortunately many of these qualities enumerated have no current and accepted method of measurement whereby they may be offered on a basis for comparison. Figures, may be, and often are, offered to show accurately the result of comparative tests which are intended as a means of comparison of the functions of a particular steel, but ordinarily, the test conditions would vary so...
