Atria Books. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 224 pages. Dimensions: 8.8in. x 5.8in. x 0.7in. An entertaining and witty guide to ordering, buying, and collecting wine -- from a trailblazing, mystique-busting, straight-talking wine expert. Wine is Judy Beardsall's passion. She believes that wine is a life-enhancing gift from the gods. And she believes that wine is meant to be savored, not sipped, at any meal except breakfast, whether on a special night or with hamburgers. For twenty years in the wine business, from her first job at New York's elegant Sherry-Lehmann wine shop -- where she later became the first woman manager -- to the creation of her very own wine at a vineyard in Tuscany, Judy Beardsall has followed her bliss and united her work in the wine trade with her love of wine. Now, in Sniffing the Cork, Judy Beardsall shares her passion with readers in a wise, witty, and wonderful guide to wine that will delight both connoisseurs and those daunted by wine shops and wine lists. Sniffing the Cork is an iconoclastic wine book. It seeks to demystify and de-mythify much of the pretension that surrounds the world of wine and intimidates the casual drinker. Banishing the confusion of winespeak -- describing wine with phrases like candied fruit, gooseberries in autumn, or flinty -- Judy Beardsall urges reader to develop their own wine language, using words and phrases that describe the feeling the wine gives them. She takes the reader on a tour of the world of wine, stopping off in the foremost wine-making countries -- where she reveals which reveals which red or white wines are the best of each region and which ones are surefire winners to try at home. Judy guides the reader through the typical wine shop where they learn, confidently, what to...
