But, at first look, I figured it would be easier to solve than the problem with millennials. Let s just deport them. But, to where? What country would take them as their reputation precedes them? Growing up in the age of social media made this generation obsessed with instant gratification. They need again the kind of great reinforcement that they had in T-Ball through adolescence when the participation trophies were the rage. Today, they get their kicks by being rewarded with online actions such as a like or retweet. The US workplace was not ready for millennials and maybe that s why, so many are still unemployed. Of course, it might also be that foreign nationals took their jobs. At work, if they can find a job, needy millennials like that feely-good stuff just like the social likes and retweets. They ll even settle for constructive criticism if that s all a peer can muster but they would prefer lots of reinforcement or praise, especially from a manager. This need was not in their original genes; but the need seeped in as dose after dose, feely-good stuff was always the remedy. Even good dads had a hard time denying them. Millennials are known as the selfish generation. It is said that they need to look up the meaning of the word, friend, each time somebody accuses them of being one. They are tarred with being the lazy and entitled generation, because from my observations, they are. Sometimes I wonder if I am the only one who sees it? Managers in the workplace when asked about millennials use a number of colorful words to...
