H., During the Year 1863, Vol. 3: Together With the Names of the Soldiers of This Town in the War Ix presenting to my fellow citizens a brief transcription from my Private Journal of Current Events for the year 1863, I would express the fond hope that while it serves to recall to memory the names of loved ones, gone before us, and scenes in which we have mingled for the support of our country and for the glory of our common God, it may also tend, in some degree, to make us cherish a deeper regard for the prosperity of our beautiful town; and strive more earnestly that the Golden Rule of Christ may pervade and twine around and beautify the whole structure of our social life.
