Brand New Book  Print on Demand .There is no aspect of our lives that is not regulated by a distant and unaccountable federal government in Washington. If we do not comply with the government s complex and often obscure demands, it may coerce us in any way it chooses, including depriving us of our property and our liberty. The coercive nature of government today is justified by the coercers as being for our own good. Today s government is intrusive in ways completely unimaginable to the Founders of our nation, and what is worse; these changes have occurred almost entirely without the consent of the governed, which should be alarming to every American regardless of their party or ideology. Since their goal is to remake America, progressives need an evolving Constitution in order to evade being limited by what the Constitution actually says. While some of the justifications for an evolving Constitution may sound superficially plausible, such as the need to adapt to changing modern circumstances, the evolving Constitution in practice has become nothing more than a collection of peremptory pronouncements by unelected judges...
